BRIEF YARNS.
It is told of Gambetta that once, when in the heyday of his power, he went to some agricultural department to consult a revolutionary candidate in favor of one of his friends. He inquired about the agriculturalists' wants. "We are sadly in need of rain," came the answer. "I'll see about it when I get to Paris," promised Gambetta. And his listeners believed in his promise. The rain came down in torrents a day or two after, and when the reactionary candidate presented himself he was hooted at. "Let your party do as much for us as Gambetta and we'll elect you," they said.

Phonetic spelling was evidently in fashion in the sixteenth century, when even Shakespeare could not spell his own name consistently. There is a letter dug from the correspondence of a lady of the sixteenth century in the book of the Cotswold family, the Hicks Beanches. One Juliana wrote it concerning a matter of a debt between herself and "My lord Auldard." And she writes: "My lord Auldard and your wife I honor and love; but your false swearing and promises I

A Confession.
Mr. Taft's admissions that there are limitations to presidential authority is nothing short of a confession that he cannot rise superior to the constitution. On with the "Roosevelt in 1912" movement.—Kansas City Journal.

Change of View.
Hungry Germany is not turning her nose quite so high against American pork. Looks as though the market were coming to the little pig that stayed at home.—Omaha Bee.

A Wise Conclusion.
The Boston women have decided not to order food by phone; "go your own way," they say, "and see what the shop looks like." It is a wise conclusion.—Knoxville Journal and Tribune.

Disturbing to Archibald.
The only thing that disturbs Mr. Archibald is the awful blow the Sherman anti-trust law will suffer as a result of the Standard decision.—Indianapolis News.
